New chief circuit judge to be elected

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — Madison County Chief Circuit Judge Charles V. Romani Jr. said he doesn't know who the next chief circuit judge will be, but he knows that it won't be him.

Romani said Wednesday he will not return to the chief judge's seat which he took in 1989.

"I think two years is long enough," Romani said.

Romani, formerly the chief criminal judge, said he hopes to return to the criminal division. "I really want to get back to trial court but I'll go wherever the new chief judge sends me," Romani said, adding that he could and likely would request a criminal assignment.

Romani said he missed hearing cases, something his duties as chief judge leave little or no time for.

As chief judge, Romani handles a variety of administrative functions: overseeing the other circuit and -associate judges, assigning cases and operations of the county's probation department. Romani said he also is required to attend several meetings, including meetings with other chief judges in Chicago.

"That takes up most of my time," Romani said.

Romani said the nine circuit judges cast votes annually on which of them will fill the chief judge's seat each July 1.

In addition to Romani, the other circuit judges are: Nicholas G. Byron, Edward C. Ferguson, Phillip J. Kardis, A.A. Mateosian, George Moran Jr., P.J. O'Neill, Paul E. Riley and John L. DeLaurenti.

The circuit judges have until Friday to turn in their votes for the one among them who will succeed Romani, but it might not take that long. An administrative assistant will tabulate the votes once they are in — which could be as early as today, Romani said.

The first job of the new chief judge will be to make assignments to the circuit court's civil, criminal, probate, juvenile, traffic and family divisions.

Romani said he doubted there would be any drastic changes to current appointments.

Faulty rumor Coach's hiring not questioned

GRANITE CITY — It was all a mistake — nobody had criticized him — but Granite City High School wrestling coach Mike Garland had reason to feel better about himself after Tuesday's School Board meeting.

Following a closed session, the board reappointed Garland along with all the other wrestling coaches at all levels.

Reacting to a rumor that Garland might not be reappointed as coach, members of the wrestling team and about a dozen of their parents presented the board with letters supporting Garland.

The parents said the letters had been signed by the parents of every member of both the varsity and junior varsity wrestling teams. Garland's varsity team had a 19-3 record this year and three of its individual wrestlers went to the state tournament.

The reappointment of Garland, along with the appointment of the other wrestling coaches for next year, had been put on hold following a

Baucum, 85, proud of Weaver Street complex

VENICE — An area developer has successfully challenged the notion that Weaver Street has to be known only for drugs.

Henry M. Baucum, owner of Baucum Realty and Home Development, has received widespread praise for his newest apartment complex, Ebony Village Apartments.

"On Weaver Street, we have had problems with crime and drugs, but we have good things, too. I'm right here in the midst of it and I don't know anywhere else where I could be treated better. I don't have any trouble with anyone," he said.

The complex consists of six buildings, with a total of 30 apartments, a barber shop, a beauty shop and grocery store.

"We have a nice two- and three-bedroom apartments. In the apartments for senior citizens, everything is furnished, including protective handrails. All they have to pay is a flat rent," he said. "We started to rehab them in 1988, and we completed it last December. They're all first-class apartments. We fixed them up inside and out. Currently there are 40 occupants in the complex and seven employees, four of whom are employed full-time, he said.

Action promised on illegal dumping

PONTON BEACH — Dogs and deer were mentioned only briefly at Tuesday night's Village Board meeting, but dumping of debris and authorities' alleged inaction on dumping were discussed in detail.

Meanwhile, at a hearing in the Granite City court on Tuesday afternoon, most dog-related allegations against Ronald Shafer of Ponton Beach were dismissed.

His brother and neighbor, Fred Shafer, continued to allege that Ronald's German shepherd dog caused the deaths of Fred's three pet deer.

According to court records, Ronald Shafer was found guilty of allowing a dog to run at large, a charge filed on Feb. 8. He was fined $50 and paid the fine on Wednesday.

Ronald Shafer was found innocent of criminal damage to property, a charge filed March 8, and innocent of a refuse violation, filed May 10.

A charge of criminal damage to property, relating to the deaths of the deer and filed Feb. 8, a charge of operating a kennel without a license, filed March 8, and an unhealthy premises allegation, filed May 10, were all dismissed by Associate Judge Robert Hennessy at the same hearing.

Fred Shafer told the Press-Record/Journal that a police officer had seen a dog inside Fred's fence, eating one of the dead deer.

On a different topic, Ronald Shafer showed photographs at Tuesday night's meeting of junk and trash dumped near a fence at the home of Gerald "Ed" Shafer, the father of Ronald and Fred.

All three Shafers reside on neighboring property in the 2600 block of Lincoln St. Ronald Shafer was protesting alleged illegal dumping on property he owns. He said he has made 13 complaints to Ponton Beach police without any action.

In a conversation with Police Chief Chet Ballew and a reporter after the meeting, Ronald Shafer issued his statement, saying he had signed only two formal complaints some time ago.

He continued to contend, however, that he had made 11 calls to police complaining of various other dumping incidents over a period of time, none resulting in any charges being filed.

Ronald Shafer alleged that his requests for action by health or police officials largely were ignored.

He obtained license numbers of several vehicles and observed some individuals he recognized dumping junk on his property, he said.

Ronald Shafer alleged a business firm in Ponton Beach dumps items on nearby land, causing water to flow back onto Ronald Shafer's property. "We are the only people in Ponton Beach to have water on their land," he said.

"A low-water dam on nearby property is the big problem, causing the water to back up west onto my property. It's been going on for two years."

The firm causing the problem should put in pipe or do something to keep the water flowing and not collecting on his property, Ronald Shafer said.

Trustees Marvin Ribbing and Loren Madison have looked at the situation and Trustee Irene Karlichek has taken time to listen to the problems, Ronald Shafer said.

Madison, who was serving as mayor pro tem in the absence of Mayor Glen Wilson, reminded

Photographer agrees to settlement on complaints

GRANITE CITY — A local photographer under fire for time delays in completing contracts for several wedding albums has made amends through the Illinois Attorney General's Office.

Calvin Lazenby, of Lazenby Photographers, 2820 Nameoki Road, had been the subject of five consumer complaints from individuals who had paid him deposits to have wedding pictures taken and albums made.

Those complaints were filed with the Regional Office of the Attorney General in Granite City, said Dennis Orsey, assistant attorney general and director of the office.

"The problem is that they all contracted with him as long as 18 months ago, and in all the cases, money was paid in advance," Orsey said.

Deposits ranged from $250 to $800 to have pictures taken and a wedding album compiled, Orsey said.

Despite several letters and conversations with Lazenby, it took an administrative subpoena to get Lazenby into the office Monday to discuss the complaints and possible remedies, Orsey said.

"We went through his files. Our office worked out an arrangement whereby he will (deliver) the albums (no later than) Friday, June 21."

Lazenby said Wednesday that he had no comment on the matter other than to say he will live up to the agreement.

Orsey said Lazenby had told him several problems had contributed to the delay, including a death in his family, equipment problems and personal health problems. "All of which may have been legitimate problems for delay in getting the work completed. But we weren't talking about delays of a couple of months; we were talking about up to 18 months."

Orsey said there had been five complaints filed with his office, but Lazenby knew of "approximately 10 other" customers who had similar problems, and he promised to rectify them, too.

"He calls himself semi-retired. He means he isn't actively soliciting for work, but that people still call him. Despite all of this, people who have talked to us remark he does do quality work."

Orsey said anyone else with a consumer complaint regarding Lazenby is being asked to call Orsey's office at 877-0404.

GCS hiring college students

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Granite City Steel will hire about a dozen people to work heat relief at the blast furnace this summer, but they won't come from the ranks of laid-off steelworkers.

According to Jerry Siner, president of Local 50 of the International Chemical Workers, the summer workers will be college students.

"We traditionally have tried to help parents at the mill get their kids into college and help pay for it," Siner said. "It's only two or three months of work, so we have always agreed to take college students."

This year, however, Granite City Steel has about 100 laid-off steelworkers — a new experience at the mill since the steelworkers' contracts have long had no lay-off clauses.

Dave Dowling, president of United Steelworkers of America Local 67, which represents a large number of the laid-off workers, said it might have been a good idea for the company to offer the blast furnace jobs to those laid-off workers.

The laid-off workers fell under a new provision in the last contract that allowed the company to lay off steelworkers with less than a year of seniority.

Bob Maxwell, director of public relations for Granite City Steel, said the blast furnace jobs are the only temporary jobs being offered this summer. He said the workers there are chemical workers rather than steelworkers and that no chemical workers have been laid off.

Dowling said it is true that the blast furnace jobs fall under a different bargaining unit and a different union. But, he said, the two unions have previously allowed workers to "switch sides."

"Shouldn't the company have taken the laid-off workers to fill any temporary jobs?" "When I was laid off in 1974 or '75, I went to work at the blast furnace, so I know it has been done in the past," Dowling said.

Siner agreed that the unions have allowed switches in the past, but said it usually was "a permanent switch involving a permanent job."

Still, Siner said, he would have had no problem with the summer relief jobs being filled by laid-off steelworkers.

"It never came up," Siner said. "The company may not have thought of it."

The extra workers allow longer work breaks for employees during extremely hot weather.

Sexual assault charge revised

EDWARDSVILLE — An amended warrant was issued Monday against a Venice man who was charged in April after he allegedly attempted to rape a 60-year-old woman in her Mitchell home.

The amended warrant was issued by Madison County State's Attorney William Haine. In the revised warrant, Larry H. Willoughby, 45, of the 600 block of Jefferson Avenue was charged with two counts of attempted aggravated sexual assault and one count of unlawful restraint.

On April 18, Willoughby allegedly went to the victim's home, where he was let in by the victim's grandson.

Willoughby then entered the victim's bedroom, where she was asleep.

The victim told authorities that she knew Willoughby had been drinking, so when he lay on the bed, she tried to get up.

Willoughby allegedly grabbed and held the woman around her waist but, after a struggle, she freed herself.

Willoughby allegedly grabbed both of the victim's wrists and forced her back down onto the bed, face-up. When the woman's screams for help were answered by her grandson, Willoughby got up and left the room, a sheriff's report said.

Deputies arrested Willoughby after seeing his 1977 Buick Riviera auto at a pay telephone at the intersection of Maryville Road and Redwood Lane.

The arrest was made about five minutes after the deputies arrived at the scene.

Beautification program will kick off Saturday

VENICE — "Together We Can Make a Difference" is the theme of a new neighborhood beautification program that will begin with a rally at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Senior Citizen Center.

The program, sponsored by the Consumer and Homemaking Education Program of the University of Illinois Extension Service, is under the direction of Venice-Madison native Patricia Shipp.

Shipp said the program is based on the philosophy that each person can make a difference. The program will provide provide residents with tools and trash bags and will offer assistance to residents who want to purchase plants and grass seed.

In addition to working on their own yards, residents will be encouraged to help others in their neighborhood with cleanup tasks. Volunteer block captains will be chosen to provide leadership and encouragement, Shipp said.

"All Venice residents are encouraged to come to the rally and catch the fever," Shipp said. "Venice is ours and will be what we make it."

Shipp said the program will run all summer and a September celebration is being planned for the participants.

For more information, call Shipp at 656-8400.

Urban League conducting 1991 membership drive

The Madison County Urban League has kicked off its annual membership drive in the metropolitan area.

In 1990, MCUL provided varied services to residents of Madison County, including 11,923 family planning services to new and continuing clients.

There were 2,600 direct services for clients of the League's housing program in the areas of mortgage default foreclosure prevention, rental delinquency, rental assistance, energy assistance and debt management.

Many services were provided to clients in the employment assistance program.

And the Alton School District, in cooperation with the Madison County Urban League, Principia College, Lewis and Clark Community College, Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville and Hayner Public Library, provided an after-school tutorial program for 115 elementary students in grades one through five.

Circuit clerks oppose child support change

By Bonita Tillman
Staff writer

Area circuit clerks are convinced a state move to change how child support collections are made will sabotage the whole system.

St. Clair County Circuit Clerk Barney Metz said the state is trying to fix something that isn't broken.

The county began the division, which employs five people, in 1985 to intensify local collection efforts of child support payments. Since that time, Metz said the Illinois Department of Public Aid, which administers the grant, has reduced his budget each year.

Although the county has submitted a budget for 1991-92, the IDPA wants the county to cut the staff.

"They expect us to work through Public Aid for collection, but that would complicate the system too much," he said.

His greatest arguing tool, he said, is the work of the division. When the state did collections, Metz said about $500,000 was collected annually. The county, however, collects more than $3 million a year.

"This is one of many grants that shows it really works," he said.

Les Firtos, administrative assistant to Madison County Circuit Clerk Willard "Butch" Portell, said he believes the program might collapse under state control.

"This is a roundabout way of sabotaging the entire (collection) effort," Firtos said. "I think they're losing sight of the program."

Madison County brings in about $3 million a year on a $151,000 annual budget.

St. Clair County's requested budget for 1991-92 is $173,000, with $152,000 of that slated for salaries and benefits.

Also at issue is the fact that the proposal would only affect six downstate counties — St. Clair, Madison, Sangamon, Peoria, Champaign and Macon.

"It's not touching Cook County at all," Metz said. He said all six clerks are working together to try and keep the program.

Metz said he could lose all five people in his division and they cannot be moved to other slots in the office, because no positions are available.

"Our people have been here for several years and they've been complimented by people who work with them," he said.

"Those girls hardly ever take a break," Firtos said at least one person would be laid off if the program were cut in Madison County and three to four others reassigned.

"If we stop getting funding on June 30, the county would have to pick up the last five months of the (fiscal) year for these people and it would affect the entire county budget," he said.

Both counties also have spent thousands of dollars to upgrade collections with computer systems in recent years.

Madison County's program, the first created in the state in 1980, was the first to have a completely automated system installed six years ago.

65 units to march in local parade

GRANITE CITY — Flags will be handed out and a variety of marching units and floats will be on hand during a special parade Saturday in Granite City.

The first annual Flag Day parade will feature 65 marching units, floats and color guards. The event will take place along Madison Avenue beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Justice must be served

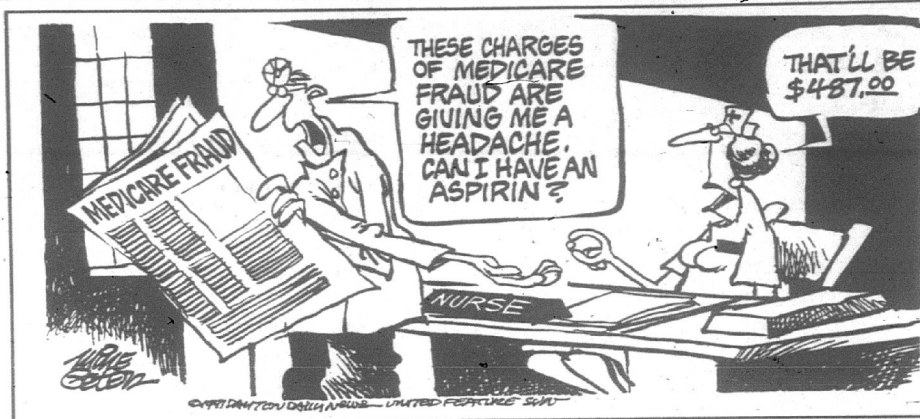

If the trend continues, the murder investigation of Heather Watson will last longer than Heather lived. That is not fair to those who stand accused, and it is not fair to others with personal interest in the case. It is also not a good reflection on how the criminal justice system is supposed to work.

Tee fathers: Not an easy role

Many snirk responsibility

By Jim Haverstick
Staff writer

Most teen-age guys are worrying about college, cars and compact discs, but not Stephen Vaughn of Mascoutah. His mind is on dirty diapers, 3 a.m. feedings and the future.

Stephen's son, Christian, was born May 16. "Being a father is everything I thought and more," Stephen, 19, said. "It takes a lot out of you. It changes you."

Stephen and his wife, Jodee, 18, were married in February. They had dated seriously since high school and had talked many times about getting married some day. However, when Jodee found out she was pregnant, they arranged a wedding in two weeks.

They both wanted children, but would have preferred to wait a few years to start a family.

Since Christian's birth, Stephen and Jodee have been pacing the floors at night, changing diapers, warming baby bottles and like many other new parents, just praying that everything turns out all right.

"He's a healthy baby, a good baby, but he is getting spoiled," Stephen said. "We have to hold him all the time, he cries when we put him down."

Stephen's attitude isn't exactly typical.

Today, it is not at all unusual for a teen-age father to have a child, but it is unusual for teen-age fathers to stay involved with their children.

In 1988, 23,169 teen-agers became parents, said Lynda Miller, executive director of Parents Too Soon, a statewide organization centered in Springfield that serves parents under the age of 21.

Despite efforts by schools to provide information about birth control, the number of teen-age parents rises every year, she said. Half of the teen mothers are 18 or older, the other half are between 13 and 17, she said.

Though it is not always the case in teen pregnancies, the fathers are frequently teen-agers also. Through information provided by teen-age mothers, Miller has learned that 75 percent of the fathers are within two to four years of the mothers' ages.

Little else is known about teen-age fathers; they rarely stay around.

Celeste Cocheba, director of the Pregnancy Care Center at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Belleville, says boys frequently blame girls for a pregnancy, but the teen-agers' families tend to blame the boys.

When a girl realizes that a girl is pregnant, she wants out of the relationship," said Cocheba. Her care center offers pre- and post-natal care for low-income families.

Boys frequently offer to help financially if the girl wants to have an abortion, but offer no support if she wants to keep the baby, she said.

"It is too much responsibility," Cocheba said. "It is a sticky situation and expensive, so the young man often leaves."

One of the reasons teen-age fathers leave is that fewer teen-agers are getting married, Miller said.

In 1970, 39 percent of teen births were to unmarried girls; in 1980, 58 percent of teen mothers were unmarried and in 1988, 78 percent were unmarried, Miller said. Those couples that do get married are frequently divorced in a year or two.

"By the end of the first year less than half of teen fathers are still involved in the child's life," Miller said.

But that figure could soon change, Miller said the federal government is cracking down on men who haven't been paying child support. If young men are not willing to act as role models for their children, they will at least be providing financial support, she said.

If too much responsibility scares some fathers away, money is also a prime factor. Teen-agers can rarely deal with the financial burden of raising a child, Cocheba said.

MICHAEL HARPER of Granite City holds his seven-month-old son, Aaron

One way to survive: Get help from own parents

By Jim Haverstick
Staff writer

One way for a teen-age father to survive the overwhelming responsibilities of parenthood is to rely on his own parents for support.

Michael Harper, 17, of Granite City admits that he would be in hot water if his parents weren't helping him and his girlfriend, Angela, take care of their 7-month old son, Aaron.

"I don't know how it is for other guys, but I am very fortunate that my parents are helping out," Michael said. "Her parents have been really great too."

Michael and Angela, are not married yet. He lives with his parents, while Angela and Aaron live with her family.

Michael does, however, have the opportunity to see Aaron everyday.

He works nights at Imo's Pizza and takes care of Aaron, during the day while Angela is in school, he said.

"My mom watches him while I sleep, then when I get up I take care of him and play with him for a little while before his nap," Michael said.

Michael said his parents have been supportive of him and Angela from the very beginning.

Michael and Angela first met more than two years ago when they both worked at Pizza Hut. They dated for a little more than ing his wife and son.

"He's just beautiful," Stephen said of Christian. "He makes me want to do everything in life differently just for him." He's happy to have a son to carry on his family name.

Stephen is planning for the future. He works with his father at NSA Water Purifying Systems as an independent contractor and distributor. Though he has taken time off to help care for Jodee and the new baby, Stephen has the potential to make $45,000 a year at his job.

He is also rebuilding an old home for his young family. Between the baby and the new house, Stephen generally works about 18 hours a day.

And when he needs help with the baby, he calls his grandmother in Michigan for advice, he said.

"It is all new to me, but it's good," Stephen said.

one year when Angela realized she was pregnant.

At first they considered putting the baby up for adoption, but then Angela decided she wanted to keep the child, he said.

Michael agreed that raising the child and themselves would be the best solution. Both his parents and hers supported their decision.

Surprisingly, Michael's friends have been very supportive, also.

"Some of the guys are curious about my having a baby, but they understand I have responsibilities and I just can't go out with them, he said. "They kid me about changing diapers, but they don't give me a hard time about it."

Michael's biggest worries were about financial problems, but his parent's put his mind at rest.

Michael said, "I was more worried about the finances."

They frequently take Aaron shopping for toys and clothes. They are helping Michael pay for such things as medical costs, food and formula, he said.

At the same time, they are teaching him how to be a good father to Aaron, Michael said. He is also grandchild of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond (Norris) Mohr.

The wedding is planned for June 22 at 7 p.m. in the Erin Baptist Church.

June 15th is the deadline to make reservations for the Belle of St. Louis riverboat cruise, which is being planned by the Magnate Security Club to celebrate the arrival of the baby.

The cruise will leave from the new Belle of St. Louis River Boat. Guests will board via the gangway onto the 500-passenger motorcade overlooking the first deck dance floor. The third or Texas Deck, host a 225-passenger private banquet room. The date is Tuesday, July 9. Boarding pass, a box lunch and transportation will cost $20. Character is the key trait, Burton Bernard found in studying Bryce

Last week's column was titled "Burton Bernard was devoted to the law, writing, research and justice."

Thanks to the help of Helen Kuenstler and Granite City librarian Bob Stack in the last several days, more information has become available so I'll complete my salute to the late Granite City attorney today.

HIS GENEROSITY already was apparent, and an additional example was Burton's gift of a 200-volume set of books to the Granite City Public Library.

First published in 1881, the books are "The War of the Rebellion: A Compilation of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies."

When Burton, a World War I veteran, gave this valuable set to the library in 1973, he dedicated it to the "memory of Tri City men who gave their lives during the war in Vietnam."

A SKILLED WRITER, Burton himself was the author of two bound volumes that are in the Granite City library.

The shortest, dealing with the famous Sacco-Vanzetti legal case, was co-authored by the local lawyer and Irving Dillard. On April 16, 1929, payroll robbers murdered a shoe factory paymaster, F.A. Parmenter, and a guard, Alessandro Beradelli, in Braintree, Mass.

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were convicted July 14, 1929, and were executed Aug. 23, 1927, after a series of unsuccessful appeals.

THE JURORS' VERDICT became a matter of dispute, with widespread protests occurring and many newspaper articles about the trial appearing in America and Europe.

At one point while considering clemency, Gov. A.T. Fuller appointed three to investigate the case and advise him. They included Harvard University President A. Lawrence Lowell.

In April 1920, the two prisoners' lives, please to save them were made to the U.S. Supreme Court, the attorney general and the President. They were demonstrations in cities around the world.

Precautions were taken against many threats of violence, and the issue remained explosive for a long time. In fact, bombs were set off in New York City and Philadelphia.

THE CROWNING achievement of Burton's writing was his 212-page book, "James Bryce: The American Commonwealth."

A Washington University (St. Louis) and Harvard Law School graduate, the Granite Cityan noted in the foreword of his book on April 16, 1990, that he was preparing to attend that spring's 40th reunion of Harvard Law School class of 1950.

Harvard University in 1969 had conferred an honorary LL.D.

degree on Bryce, whose life spanned the years 1838 to 1922.

Burton's widely-praised review of Bryce's career was begun a century after Bryce wrote "The American Commonwealth" in 1888.

THE BOOK BY BRYCE had dealt with American government, politics and society.

Although Bryce was British, he visited the United States in 1870, 1881 and 1883 and his book contained much information and insight.

It became a classic and was credited with helping Americans understand their country better.

It was called both a basic working manual for all students of American politics and an indispensable source for future historians of the United States.

Bryce's work was favorably compared with the findings of Alexis de Tocqueville, the Frenchman who wrote the acclaimed "Democracy in America" a half-century earlier.

BURTON'S LATE-1980s decision to write about Bryce was strengthened by the fact that American authors had provided only one book about Bryce — and that one had long been out of print.

Also, Burton wrote in the foreword, Bryce was a lawyer with close ties to the American legal community, to the two universities Burton had attended, and to the St. Louis metropolitan area.

Bryce became a lawyer in 1867, the year Washington U. created its Department of Law.

In addition, Bryce taught and wrote extensively about the law, Burton noted.

In 1907, on a motion by St. Louisan Frederick Lehmann, Bryce became an honorary member of the American Bar Association.

THAT EVENTFUL YEAR, two of Bryce's works were published as part of Volume I of "Select Essays in Anglo-American Legal History," compiled and edited by a committee of the Association of American Law Schools.

After being named as Great Britain's ambassador to the United States, Bryce in 1907 traveled to St. Louis to deliver the principal address at the commencement celebrating Washington University's centennial.

He ultimately held degrees from 33 universities in eight countries. From 1913-17, he served as president of the British Academy.

MOUNT BRYCE, a Canadian peak 11,507 feet high, is named for him. The mountain is near Banff National Park in British Columbia.

Above all, Burton was impressed by Bryce the man — his ability, curiosity, diverse interests, compassion and dedication.

Burton felt that, by dedicating and delivering his book on Bryce to the Harvard Law School last year, he could best express his gratitude for Burton's "increased awareness that character is the noble profession of the law."

The lives of both Bryce and Burton clearly exemplified this ideal.

O'Fallon man tapped for state board of education

By Liz Quirin
Staff writer

O'Fallon School District 90 board member Herb Roach has been tapped for a six-year term on the Illinois State Board of Education.

Roach, 44, was notified last week that he was being considered for a post on the State Board. A letter from Gov. Jim Edgar's office on Monday confirmed his appointment.

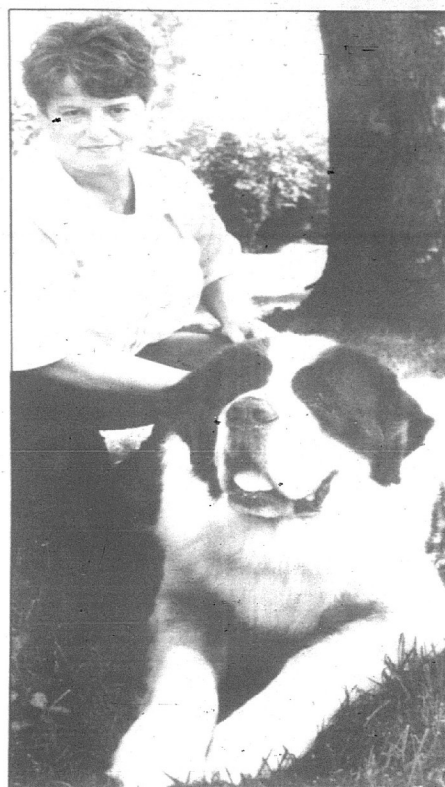

He must still appear before the state senate for confirmation. No date has been set for that hearing. Roach replaces Thomas Burroughs of Collinsville, who died earlier this year. Burroughs was chairman of the state board.

Roach, of O'Fallon, said he would be happy to serve on the state board because he believes in a strong commitment to education.

"If we don't give kids an education, we're sending them out with one hand tied behind them," Roach said.

Roach has served on the District 90 school board for the last eight years. His current term is up in November.

Top dogs Local canines compete at invitation-only show

By Ron Sammons
Staff writer

Two entrants from Granite City were among those competing last week in the Purina Dog Show Invitational on the campus of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

It is the largest invitation-only dog show in the nation. The local entrants were Waldo, a 6½-year-old male St. Bernard owned by Tony and Barb Sarti, and Beets, a tri-colored American foxhound owned by Juanita Troyer.

To attend the show, the dog must rank in the Top 10 of its breed throughout the nation. This is achieved by gaining points at various dog shows throughout the year. Barb Sarti said.

"You get invited by last year's points, and every year you start over from scratch again," she said.

Both dogs have won many awards in the past several years, the owners said.

Winners in the dog shows receive trophies and prestige, but no money.

"Waldo has won in excess of 80 best-of-breed awards, and has been in the top 10 for the past three years," Sarti said.

But this was probably his last show.

"He's basically retired, and hasn't been shown this year," she said.

"We've been showing him about 40 weekends a year for the last three years."

"He is six and a half years old and that's pretty old for a St. Bernard."

Waldo did not place in the Purina show.

Beets, which got a best-of-breed award at the Purina show, has also been active in various showings recently, Troyer said.

She has quite a few best-of-breed awards, and the year before last she had two group placements. She is 4 years old and is in her prime.

"I'll continue to show her for another year and then she'll retire. When she does retire, however, she'll keep her championship title. They keep that throughout their lives," she said.

To the average person, raising a show dog may seem easy, but it requires experience and patience, Troyer said.

"You start with them as young pups, and train and discipline them. We've been doing this for about 20 years now," Sarti said.

"We decided to raise St. Bernards after we went to a show in St. Joseph, Mo., where a friend of ours, who breeds St. Bernards, was showing his."

"We saw an exceptional one from Ohio, and our stock started from him. Waldo was part of our last litter, and hopefully we'll have a litter from him this summer," she said.

Troyer began raising animals during her childhood.

"I was raised on a farm in Missouri, and I was always interested in livestock and animals," she said.

"I worked at a horse race track for about seven years after high school. Because of this, I was always interested in the quality of an animal, but you can't bring a horse home with you."

"Breeding for better quality interested me," Troyer said. "and with a dog, the better its breed, the better job it can do."

The annual dog shows are important events, the owners said.

Besides helping their pets gain points, the shows "help maintain the quality in purebred dogs," Sarti said.

"Money is not the purpose of the event at all," Troyer added.

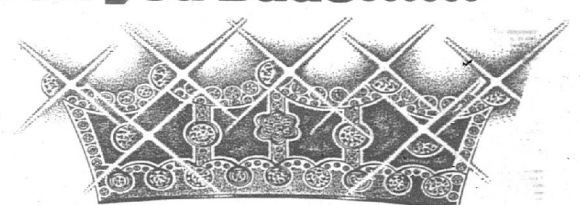

"While most people get together to talk about work, we gather to talk about dogs," she said.

Trio Unit meets

The Trio Unit of Homemakers Extension of Madison County met at Hope Lutheran church on June 4 with 40 women present. An interesting lesson on "Food Safety in the Microwave Oven" was given by Dorothy Luckert and Mary Sikes. Since over 70 percent of the homes have microwave ovens, it is important to be aware of food safety in their use.

Members were reminded to cook food thoroughly and to follow directions in thawing and reheating foods. Heat must be high enough to kill any bacteria present which can double in number every 20 minutes. If the correct method of cooking is not used, there is a chance of getting salmonella or botulism, which can cause serious illness or even death.

Election of officers was held with Dorothy Luckert elected treasurer and Virginia Little and second vice chairman.

The next meeting will be July 2 at Hope Lutheran Church and the lesson will be "How to Apply Cosmetics."

Travelers holds potluck

Travelers Abroad discontinued its meetings for the summer following an outdoor potluck supper at the home of Georgia Engelke.

Eighteen members and five guests were present for an abundance of food and fellowship. Charles Schweizer gave the prayer before the meal.

Dr. Alice Purdes, president, asked members to be on the lookout for travel speakers for the coming year.

As the highlight of the evening, Mrs. Engelke had made arrangements for Legacy golf carts to be parked at her home. Everyone, two people to a cart, participated in a cavalcade on the six-mile path through the golf course, ending at the Engelke residence. For many persons, this was their first time driving a golf cart and viewing an entire golf course.

Luke 18:38 ... "And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me."

One of the outstanding miracles of the Bible — and it almost didn't happen! This man was blind and in a desperate situation. He had heard that Jesus could perform miracles, and when Jesus passed by, he cried out to Him for mercy. He needed a miracle.

Then a strange thing happened. The people around the blind man began to rebuke him. They told him to keep quiet about his need. Thank God he didn't take their advice. He cried out all the more, and this time Jesus stopped and asked him to come forward. The man responded and asked that he might receive his sight. Jesus simply said, "Thy faith hath saved thee." And he was healed.

When you have a need, don't hesitate to ask, to seek, or to knock. We have not because we ask not.

The Lord will have mercy on you.

Today.

Baucum

Baucum, has lived here 70 years. He first went into business in 1927, operating the Baucum Market in North Venice, after graduating from Lincoln High School in East St. Louis.

"I've been in Venice a long time," he said. "I owned the grocery store right by the apartments until 1982, when I retired. What started me on this whole rental business idea was when I worked in the grocery store. I knew this man that I traded with, he was a World War I vet, and his parents died and left him their three room home."

"He came up to me one day and said he couldn't afford to keep it. Then he told me that he'd give me the house if I made sure he was taken care of."

"That's what started it all," he said. "After the agreement, the man died and Baucum decided to rent out the house. After that initial acquisition, Baucum became more interested in rental properties and started buying others, including an old movie theater, he said."

"I owned the theater along with a partner," Baucum said. "It got burned down. I bought out my half and decided to make apartments out of it."

"At an auction, I bought two old barracks from Scott Air Field, had them wrecked and used the materials to build eight apartments. I had a friend who was a good carpenter, and he and I built them. I used to like to do that kind of stuff."

At that time, his wife, Miriam, became ill. Baucum said their future security, and he decided to sell the apartments, he said.

Years later, in 1962, he decided to retire from the store and sold it, although he still owns the building in which it is located.

During his retirement, Baucum began to search for something to occupy his time, he said. "I got tired of sitting around, so I started looking at some of my properties, opened up my realty and got back into the apartment business."

Baucum now owns 40 rental units in Venice and is considering permanent retirement, he said. "I guess I'm getting kind of old. I think I'm going to finally quit. I've observed my 85th birthday on June 1."

Madison attorney Victoria Vasileff, a member of the Madison-Venice Rotary Club, is pleased with Baucum's success.

"Henry is also a member of the Rotary Club and he is very proud of him," she said. "He is one of those people I'm really glad to know because he has done so much."

"It is amazing that he has enough energy and public interest to do this. It's wonderful that he's making a success in Venice, a place the general public would perceive to be a bad place to invest in. He has proved this to be wrong," she said.

Venice Mayor Tyrone Echols agreed. "I consider him to be a very important pioneer in the city of Venice."

"He's been a good real estate agent and has provided decent places to live in Venice," Echols said.

In 1980, Baucum was honored by the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce for outstanding community service. Formerly a member of the Madison Board of Education for 12 years, Baucum was a Venice 4th Ward alderman before being elected as city treasurer for a four-year term in the 1970s.

Born in Mississippi, he has been part of the business world since the age of 11, when he began pressing clothes. "Everything has been manual labor. The coffee, milk, sugar and beans all came in bulk. I had to haul in heavy sacks and containers and measure out each purchase. And the hours were long, starting at 5:30 a.m."

Although his hours have improved, Baucum remains actively involved in his neighborhood, city and region.

Dumping

Ronald Shafer said the village didn't have a dumping law until recently.

"We couldn't do anything until May 1987, it was a civil case between us and them," Madison said.

"Our police department now would be out there visiting the dumping ordinance," Madison said.

"This is not a hearing and that's an administrative matter," Madison said to Ronald Shafer, who continued to protest to the trustees.

"We don't want this to be a continual battle between families," Madison said.

Trustee Robert Douglas reminded Ronald Shafer that a cease and desist order was filed against him by the U.S. Corps of Engineers on Dec. 13 and on Jan. 22.

"The village was advised of the order in a letter on April 26 from the Horseshoe Lake Resource Planning Committee relating to fill being dumped on adjacent wetlands north of Horseshoe Lake and west of Illinois 311."

Ronald Shafer owns property across from Spartan Health Spa, on which additional fill is prohibited from being dumped. He is alleged to be the U.S. Corps of Engineers is empowered to oversee compliance with the cease and desist order.

"You were the one who gave permission to dump to the drivers," Douglas alleged to Ronald Shafer.

"I'd like the chief of police to report at the next meeting on what happened with the complaints," he said. "Ronald is talking about," Trustee Louis Whitsett said.

"We have a lot of illegal dumping going on in Pontoon Beach," Madison said.

"There isn't going to be any more dumping in Pontoon Beach," Douglas said.

Fred Shafer then alleged Ronald Shafer still was dumping on property next door to Fred's land.

"You are talking about trespassing," Ronald Shafer replied. He was aware that some neighbors don't like it stockpiled, but it has dwindled down and is being moved to the back, he said.

Fred Shafer said a petition was being signed by some people against having a dog kennel in the area.

Ronald Shafer was issued a license on May 29 when it was determined he had five dogs instead of the four dogs permissible under a village ordinance.

The license was rescinded at the continuation of the same meeting on May 30 when Fred Shafer brought the incident of the deaths of his deer to the board's attention.

Coach

closed session at the May 28 Board of Education meeting.

In response to the parents at Tuesday's meeting, board member Debbie Wilkerson said she had requested the delay because she wanted information concerning the number of students who participated in the program this year.

She said her request was in response to a question by one of her constituents and said neither she nor any other board member had questioned the performance of Garland or any other wrestling coach.

Board President Roy Koberna said Wednesday that Garland's reappointment had never been in question. But, Koberna said, the rumor points out a problem the board has with the process of making extracurricular appointments.

Koberna said the board has asked the administration to establish a formal process for evaluating the performance of persons appointed to extracurricular posts.

"Sometimes it seems like 'the administration think it's just part-time' and don't take it that seriously," Koberna said.

"But think the parents last night showed they take it very seriously and I think the board takes it very seriously."

One problem, Koberna said, is a reluctance of the administrators to put things in writing. He said he sees no reason why information concerning the performance of Garland or any other wrestling coach, like that requested by Wilkerson, is not routinely given to the board along with the administration's recommended appointments or reappointments.

Pat Schuman, director of personnel, said the administration agrees with Koberna and will have the information available in the future. Schuman said the district is establishing a formal set of questions that the athletic directors and/or principals will use to evaluate all extracurricular programs and the performance of the coaches, sponsors or supervisors in the programs.

"I think in the past the board was informed only if there was a problem," Schuman said. "Otherwise, there was no indication of the kind of job a coach had done."

If coaches, sponsors, band leaders and everyone else are aware they are being evaluated and are aware of the criteria being used to evaluate them and their programs, Schuman said, they will have the opportunity to put their best foot forward for the board.

"I think our coaches have remained an unknown quality," Schuman said. "Take Ron Penell and his debate team this year. We had him come and talk to the board several times. Otherwise, the board might never have been aware of the wonderful things he and those kids have done."

Schuman said the main interest of the administration is to offer extra-curricular activities in which students are willing to participate.

He said, in fact, is to find ways to make the school's programs more attractive to students than the other, sometimes detrimental, activities that compete for a student's free time.

"This board is more concerned about these things than others have been in the past," Schuman said. "It's made a world of difference to us. This board is taking a real, active interest in the welfare of the students and we want that to continue."

Baucum

clients, has lived here 70 years. He first went into business in 1927, operating the Baucum Market in North Venice, after graduating from Lincoln High School in East St. Louis.

"I've been in Venice a long time," he said. "I owned the grocery store right by the apartments until 1982, when I retired."

"What started me on this whole rental business was when I worked in the grocery store. I knew this man that I traded with; he was a World War I vet, and his parents died and left him their three-room home."

"He came up to me one day and said he couldn't afford to keep it. Then he told me that he'd give me the house if I made sure he was taken care of."

"That's what started it all."

Six years after the agreement, the man died and Baucum decided to rent out the house. After that initial acquisition, Baucum became more interested in renting properties and he began buying others, including an old movie theater, he said.

"I owned the theater along with a partner and we had a fire that burned down. I bought out his half and decided to make apartments out of it."

"At an auction I bought two old barracks from Scott Air Field, had them wrecked and used the materials to build eight apartments. I had a friend who was a good carpenter, and he and I built them. I used to like to do that kind of stuff."

At that time, his wife, Miriam, became ill and he decided to sell the apartments, he said. Years later, in 1982, he decided to retire from the store and sold it, although he still owns the building in which it is located.

During his retirement, Baucum began to search for something to occupy his time, he said. "I got tired of sitting around, so I started looking at some of my properties, opened up my realty and got back into the apartment business."

Baucum now owns 40 rental units in Venice and is considering permanent retirement, he said. "I guess I'm getting kind of old. I think I'm going to finally quit. I observed his 85th birthday on June 1."

Madison attorney Victoria Vassileff, a member of the Madison-Venice Rotary Club, is pleased with Baucum's success.

"Henry is also a member of the Rotary Club and we are very proud of him," she said. "He is one of those people I'm really glad to know because he has done so much."

"It is amazing that he has enough energy and public interest to do this. It's wonderful that he's making a success in Venice, a place the general public would perceive to be a bad place to invest in. He has proved this to be wrong," she said.

Venice Mayor Tyrone Echols agreed. "I consider him to be a very important pioneer in the city of Venice."

"He's been a good real estate agent and has provided decent places to live in Venice," Echols said.

In 1980, Baucum was honored by the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce for outstanding community service. Formerly a member of the Madison Board of Education for 12 years, Baucum was a Venice 4th Ward alderman before being elected as city treasurer for a four-year term in the 1970s.

He recalls that his early years as a grocer were not difficult because "I had already learned how to work hard."

Everything was manual labor. The coffee, milk, sugar and beans all came in bulk. I had to haul in heavy sacks and containers and measure out each purchase. And the hours were long, starting at 5:30 a.m."

Although his hours have improved, Baucum remains actively involved in his neighborhood, city and region.

Coach

closed session on the May 28 Board of Education meeting.

In response to the parents at Tuesday's meeting, board member Debbie Wilkerson said she had requested the delay because she wanted information concerning the number of students who participated in the program this year.

She said her request was in response to a question by one of her constituents and said neither she nor any other board member had questioned the performance of Garland or any other wrestling coach.

Board President Roy Koberna said Wednesday that Garland's reappointment had never been in question. But, Koberna said, the rumor points out a problem the board has with the process of making extracurricular appointments.

Koberna said the board has asked the administration to establish a formal process for evaluating the performance of persons appointed to extracurricular posts.

Sometimes it seems like (the administration) think it's just part-time and don't take it that seriously," Koberna said. "But think the parents last night showed they take it very seriously and I think the board takes it very seriously."

One problem, Koberna said, is a reluctance of the administrators to put things in writing. He said he sees no reason why information concerning the program, like that requested by Wikerson, is not routinely given to the board along with the administration's recommended appointments or reappointments.

Pat Schuman, director of personnel, said the board agrees with Koberna and will have the information available in the future.

Schuman said the district is establishing a formal set of questions that the athletes, teachers and/or principals will use to evaluate all extracurricular programs and the performance of the coaches, sponsors or supervisors.

"I think in the past the board was informed only if there was a problem," Schuman said. "Otherwise, there was no indication of the kind of job a coach had done."

If coaches, sponsors, band leaders and everyone else are aware they are being evaluated and are aware of the criteria being used to evaluate them and their programs, Schuman said, they will have the opportunity to put their best foot forward for the board.

"I think our coaches have remained an unknown quality," Schuman said. "Take Ron Pennell and his debate team this year. We had him come and talk to the board several times. Otherwise, the board might never have been aware of the wonderful things he and those kids have done."

Schuman said the main interest of the administration is to offer extra-curricular activities in which students are willing to participate.

His concern, he said, is to find ways to make the school's programs more attractive to students than the other, sometimes detrimental, activities that compete for a student's free time.

"This board is more concerned about the things that others have been in the past," Schuman said. "It's made a world of difference to us. This board is taking a real, active interest in the welfare of the students and we want that to continue."

Triplets beat Highland for 5th straight

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

HIGHLAND — The Triplets are giving Ralph Burnett no reason to back off on his unbridled enthusiasm. Burnett thinks this is the best Post 113 team he has managed, and they won their fifth straight game Wednesday, a 6-2 decision at Highland (1-2). Post 113 is 6-1 heading into tonight's 7:30 home game against East St. Louis (1-0).

Once again, the Triplets got a tidy pitching performance Wednesday following Brian Harshany's brilliant performance on Tuesday (see related story). Rich Schardan (2-0) — like Harshany a college freshman (at Lindenwood) — allowed only two hits and two unearned runs in five innings before Randy Scott finished up with two innings of one-hit ball.

"Richie tore up his knee something awful last November," said Burnett. "The doctor told him it would be a full year before he could do anything. He came to my house and asked when the first game was. He said he would be there. He's not quite back to where he was last year, but Richie's an awful good pitcher."

Post 113 jumped all over Highland lefty Brian Gibbs with five runs in the first. Jeff Stephens led off with a double, then Harshany, Dan Partney and Erik Lewis all followed with hits to right field. Bill Van Buskirk "finished the inning with a two-run single."

"I like the way Granite City swings the bat," said Highland manager Wayne Wirz. "Our pitcher was throwing away to them and they went to right field nicely."

Nordstrom doubled home another run in the second, but the Triplets managed only three more hits the rest of the way against Gibbs, who pitched a complete game.

"I might have to add something to my pre-game speech," said Burnett, who likes beating Highland more than anything. "We started out doing everything right at the plate, but then we started opening up the hips and trying to pull everything."

"Randy Scott did a good job. We planned on being ahead by more than four runs when he came in. A misplay or two there and the tying run comes up. But he did well."

Two Triplet errors gave Highland two runs without a hit in the fourth, but that was all.

"This is the deepest pitching staff I've ever had," said Burnett. "We've had two complete games this week and we allowed only three hits tonight. We're going to be tough to beat."

Post 113 travels to Smithton for a 6 p.m. game Friday, then is off until Tuesday, when Collinsville comes to town. Next after that is Edwardsville a week from tonight. Burnett has promised his players a special treat that night if they win all the games between now and then.

"It might be too early to say anything about that right now, but let's just say they're looking forward to it," said Burnett.

Burnett said Chris Hill would start against East St. Louis tonight.

MADISON — Marvis Jones has been one of the best-kept secrets in the metro east. But her basketball talents were quickly discovered by Lincoln (Ill.) College, which offered her a scholarship. Jones, who averaged more than 18 points per game and racked up 27 three-pointers for the Trojanettes last season, finalized the deal by signing a national letter of intent June 10.

"I liked their program and felt it was perfect for me," Jones said. "They have an excellent academic program. I'm excited about playing college basketball. I didn't receive many offers, but this scholarship is my reward for all the hard work I've put in during the last four years."

Lincoln coach Donna Bonebrake was impressed with Jones' versatility.

"She has the ability to make an immediate impact with our club," Bonebrake said. "I'm looking to play her right away at the power forward position. We graduated three frontline people and Marvis could fill that void."

But Jones, who developed her game by playing pickup games with the boys, only stands 5-8. Her size, however, isn't a major concern.

"I'm not intimidated by anyone on the court," Jones said. "I feel that my talents will rise with the level of competition I'll be playing with and against. My outside shooting ability should open up the lane for me."

"Playing with the boys was a real help. They gave me a chance and also told me what I was doing wrong. My biggest shortcoming was rebounding."

They were bigger and stronger than me, so they made me work pretty hard inside. Playing against them taught me how to box people out and to jump for the ball. It really paid off when I went back to playing against the girls."

NOTES: Gayle McRoberts, who coached volleyball and girls basketball at Madison during the last four years, has accepted a job at Chatham-Glenwood High School near Springfield. McRoberts will be a physical education teacher and the volleyball coach.

Retreads Recycling efforts may help firm

By Ron Sammons
Staff writer

Bandag Inc., a company that specializes in retreading tires, may benefit from government attempts to conserve resources and encourage recycling.

These efforts should promote business for Brähler's Truckers Supply Inc. in Granite City, one of the 500 licensed members of the organization, said Larry Renaker, executive vice president. Other area branches are located in Mt. Vernon, Champaign and Jacksonville, he said.

The federal requirement "asked all operations that buy tires to first retread their old ones if possible," Renaker said, "and this includes the Army, Navy, Marines and other such operations."

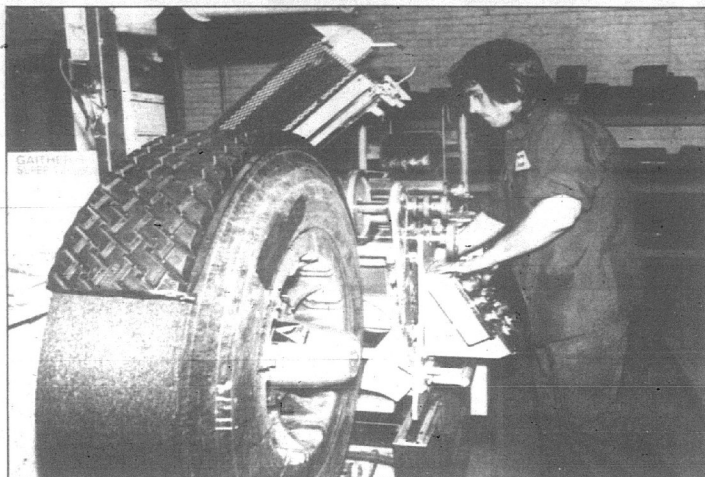

At the present time, the Granite City and Jacksonville locations together retread more than 50,000 truck tires a year, he said. "In 1990, there were 9,750,000 tires retreaded, and the number of new tires bought was extremely close. Within the next year, more retread truck tires will be used than new ones."

According to Renaker, the retreaded tires are as safe as new ones. "Most people don't know this, but all of the jet airplanes use retreads," he said, "and they are retreaded 10 to 15 times."

Under optimal driving conditions, both types of tires can be driven 200,000 miles, but newer tires are much more expensive, Renaker said.

"Retreaded truck tires cost about $75 to $110, while new ones will run $240 to $375. Also, 22 to 28 gallons of oil are needed to make a new truck tire, while retreads save an average of 15 gallons of oil."

The use of retreads will save millions of gallons of oil and cut tire costs by two-thirds, he said.

MIKE WHITEHEAD RETREADS a tire at Brähler's Truckers Supply in Granite City.

Renaker doubts the increased popularity of retread tires for trucks will carry over into the car market. "It won't take place at this point in time," he said. "The mass production of new tires for cars won't allow for it. Passenger tires are so cheap that retread use wouldn't be cost effective. A small percentage of cars have retreads, but not very many."

The retreading process begins with a visual examination for body damage and separation, where about 10 to 12 percent of the tires brought in are disposed of, he said.

Next, the tire's tread is removed and the rubber shavings are collected and sold to recyclers. Then the buffed tire is inspected with an X-ray machine that marks any possible air leaks or defects in the steel. "This can't be done on new tires, they can't be X-rayed like retreads can," Renaker said.

Following the scan, air leaks are filled with a liquid rubber and the new tread is cut to fit and sealed to the tire with an adhesive. "The style of tread depends on the type of the truck, each type receives a different kind of tread," he said.

The final step of the retreading process involves stretching a rubber envelope over the repaired tire and curing it at 210 degrees in a vacuum chamber. Renaker said 22 tires can be cured in the chamber at a time. Before the retreaded tire leaves the plant, it and the rim are coated with fresh paint.

Bandag Inc. accounts for more than 50 percent of the retread tire market and has been retreading tires since 1957, when the process was brought to the U.S. from Germany, Renaker said. The company's two biggest contracts right now are from Munson Trucking, Inc., of Monmouth and United Parcel Service.

The Granite City branch has been in operation at 1100 Niedringhaus Ave. for 11 years and currently employs 34 people, he said.

Disasters draining Red Cross relief fund

In the midst of tornado and flood seasons in the United States, an unusually high number of disasters throughout the U.S. have already nearly depleted the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund.

Since last July, the Red Cross has allocated more than $40 million of its $46 million relief fund to help the victims of flooding, tornadoes, fires, ice storms and other natural disasters.

According to Ron Streiler, manager of the Tri-City Chapter, Red Cross workers have sheltered and fed more than 549,000 people, distributed almost 71,000 comfort kits and 31,000 clean-up kits and have given more than 48,000 disaster-affected families financial assistance to purchase new clothing, groceries, and household items.

Financial contributions to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund can be mailed to the Tri-City Chapter American Red Cross, 3728 Namooki Road, Granite City, IL 62040, or the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013. The toll-free number for charging contribution to Visa or Mastercard is 1-800-842-2200.

Phone service set for bills

Illinois Bell customers now can pay their monthly telephone bills by phone, via a free electronic payment system.

Enrolled customers simply call a toll-free number from a touch tone phone, enter a private code, and then choose the amount to be transferred from their checking account to Illinois Bell to pay that month's bill.

Residence and business customers will receive an application for the Illinois Bell pay-by-phone system in the June telephone bill, according to Jan

Hines, Illinois Bell customer service manager.

"Paying by phone saves customers both time and money," Hines said. "Calling is quicker than writing checks, and the free call saves you the cost of a stamp."

The system also gives customers more control, Hines said.

"You can use the system to pay the bill the day you want to, without worrying about whether the post office will deliver it in time."

'City Slickers' funny film with good cast

'City Slickers'
3 stars

Rated: PG-13R

(adult language)

Length: 1 hr., 54 min.

Starring:

Billy Crystal

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Any man who has ever fretted over a birthday, or remembers the moment he discovered he actually wasn't going to live forever, will find a lot to relate to in "City Slickers," a very funny film about unnecessary panic over aging and some of the comically desperate steps some men will take to regain the illusion they're ageless.

"City Slickers" opens in Pamplona, Spain, moments before the start of the city's yearly exercise in frenzied stupidity during which dozens of bulls are allowed to run the streets, stampeding a much larger herd of screaming, frightened men who are trying to outrun the galloping beasts.

Billy Crystal, Bruno Kirby and Daniel Stern headline in "City Slickers," playing three lifelong friends who have traveled to Pamplona to participate in the event. The trio have developed an annual ritual in which they spend their vacation together. In more recent years, they have been taking trips that seem primarily aimed at reaffirming their virility.

Crystal's character, Mitch Robbins, is a radio time salesman in New York City preparing to celebrate his 39th birthday and trying to rediscover his virility. Mitch's understanding but frustrated wife Barbara is played by "thirtysomething's" Patricia Wettig.

Kirby is Ed Furillo, a successful sporting goods store owner who is single and dates a girl in her early 20s who is an under-weather model.

Stern plays Phil Berquist, the manager of a large food store owned by his father-in-law.

Phil has a wife who is such a witch that when asked to name the very best day in his life, Phil says his wedding day; when asked to name his very worst day, Phil says every day since.

At the urging of Phil and Ed, Mitch is convinced to join them in New Mexico at a place called the Stone Canyon Ranch. The ranch offers a vacation package that allows participants to take part in a cattle drive to Durango, Colo. The trek includes the handling of 200 head of cattle and the chance to become a real cowboy. The hope is that the three friends will get some fresh perspectives on their lives, especially Mitch, who has become increasingly melancholy over every facet of his existence.

Also along for the drive in "City Slickers" are Helen Slater as Bonnie, a young business woman, and veteran actor Jack Palance as Curly, the menacing trail boss.

Palance is superb and demonstrates that he hasn't missed a beat since his landmark role in "Shane" from 1953.

"City Slickers" was co-authored by Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel, whose previous hits include "Parenthood," "Splash" and "Night Shift." The script was based on an idea by Billy Crystal.

Much of "City Slickers" is written and built around Crystal's ability to get a laugh, and he gets plenty in this film. From the animation of the opening credits to the arrival home scene in New York, "City Slickers" more or less successfully combines good ensemble casting, strong entertainment values and even a few socially thought-provoking concepts on refraining your life that all seem to make sense.

But what makes the most sense in "City Slickers" is its sharp penchant for fun, making it a summer movie comedy not to be missed.

Crystal hits the range

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Filmgoers often wonder where ideas for new movies come from.

Billy Crystal says the idea for the new Castle Rock Entertainment release "City Slickers," in which he stars with Bruno Kirby and Daniel Stern, hit him one night while he was watching television at his Los Angeles home.

"City Slickers" is my coming-of-middle-age movie," the 44-year-old Crystal says. "I was watching a television show on fantasy vacations and I found myself thinking about a cattle drive. I wrote the words down on a nearby pad of paper, and then I started envisioning Jack Palance as the tough trail boss in the picture."

"I had been looking for a story to put my brand of comedy on since 'When Harry Met Sally,' Crystal continued, "but hadn't seen anything I liked. This idea just seemed to take off, and it was only a year after I had scribbled the words 'cattle drive' down that I found myself with Bruno Kirby and Daniel Stern out in the great Southwest with all of us sitting on very large horses."

Kirby played Crystal's friend in "When Harry Met Sally." Stern was the bumbling burglar opposite Joe Pesci in "Home Alone."

"City Slickers" is the story of three friends from New York City who take offbeat vacations together and sign up for a dude ranch holiday that takes them on a real cattle drive from New Mexico to Colorado.

"I wanted to make a movie about friendship," Crystal said.

"Friends can become a special type of family, but never get to know each other until they are forced to bond together and trust one another with their lives."

"The things that happen to these three guys in this picture are literally life-threatening at times. There are scenes in a raging river and chasing down cattle that we did ourselves, without benefit of stuntmen, just to bring the most realism we could to that point. I think it's critical to the validity of the picture's story."

And none of the film was shot on a backlot in Hollywood. The filmmakers shot in varied landscapes around Durango, Colo., and Santa Fe, N.M.

The three stars all had to learn to ride horses for the film. So, months before the production began, the actors began riding lessons under the experienced hand of expert horseman and stuntman Jerry Gatlin, who also taught them how to rope and wrangle.

"Billy actually roped a cow the first time he tried," said co-star Bruno Kirby. "They put a rope in his hand, and boom! It was like watching Babe Ruth point and hit a home run."

Kirby himself had a much harder time. Once he started riding classes, he discovered he was allergic to horses and ended up having to take a special series of injections throughout the production to finish the picture.

"I had a horse named Beechnut who was great," Crystal said.

Crystal became so attached to Beechnut, that after filming on "City Slickers" he purchased the quarter horse and now houses him in a stable in the hills near Los Angeles.
